

TEEN EMOTIONAL REGULATION

WHAT IS EMOTIONAL REGULATION?

Emotional Regulation skills are used to help adolescents manage negative emotions, including anger. The emotional regulation group teaches adolescents how to appropriately identify and express their emotions. The goal of the emotional regulation group is to empower each adolescent to experience and express emotions in healthy, positive, and non-destructive ways.

The emotional regulation group meets weekly for 12 weeks. All groups are one hour in length. An assessment and treatment planning session is required prior to the start of group.
